

WEEK 2 QB STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR PLAYERS ON LESS THAN 70% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

AARON RODGERS (PIT) VS SEA

This one seems reactive because he threw four touchdowns last week, but I'm being more conservative on what we can expect from him against a SEA defense that held their opponent to under 20 points and forced two turnovers. I believe he can be a top 15 QB, capable of getting you around 200 yards and two touchdowns. I think the offense will run through Rodgers's arm in the red zone, unless they face a bad run defense. I wouldn't make him the top priority since he is not likely to be a weekly top 12 QB.

2

MATTHEW STAFFORD (LAR) @ TEN

Although his stats weren't impressive against HOU last week, he appeared healthy enough to be a viable streaming option against favorable matchups. Facing a TEN defense, it should be easier for Stafford and the offense to score more than 14 points. The combination of Davante Adams and Puka Nacua combined for over 70% of his passing yards, and if they continue to improve their chemistry, a top 10 finish is not unreasonable. I have him as a decent streaming option in larger single QB leagues.

3

TREVOR LAWRENCE (JAX) @ CIN

While Lawrence didn't look good against a beatable CAR defense, I believe the delay and the success of the running game contributed to the subpar performance. The chemistry with rookie Travis Hunter was encouraging and I expect Brian Thomas to be more involved in the offense. Facing CIN next week, Lawrence will have more opportunities to throw the ball if the CIN offense bounces back from its poor performance. He's one of the riskier streaming options, but he also has a higher upside than some of the other names here.

4

J.J. MCCARTHY (MIN) VS ATL

Coming off an inconsistent performance, the comeback was impressive, and he ended up finishing as a top 12 QB in his first start against a decent CHI defense. While the rushing touchdown was nice, I'm not expecting that to be a regular occurrence, which lowers his upside/floor. Facing ATL next week, he is more likely to finish outside of the top 12, but I like the upside, and if he has a more consistent performance, I can see him being a top 10 option against good matchups.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM