WEEK 12 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 80% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

NEW YORK GIANTS @ IND

After an impressive performance against JAX last week, this defense has recently been solid, generating a sack and a turnover in three straight games. Now they face a struggling IND offense that's bottom-ten in total yards and points scored per game and has failed to score 14 points in three of its last five games. Additionally, they're starting their backup after cutting Daniel Jones and lead the league in turnovers, making this defense one of the top streaming options this week.

WASHINGTON COMMANDERS @ ARI

After a decent game against a dangerous CIN offense, this defense has been alright recently, generating a sack in all four games and multiple turnovers in three. They have also held opponents to under 21 points in three games and face an ARI offense that has failed to score double-digit points in three straight games and ranks in the bottom five in points scored per game. Because of the great matchup and top-ten upside, I would consider them one of the preferred options.

TAMPA BAY BUCCANEERS VS CAR

While they were disappointing last week against DET, don't forget how good they looked before the bye week, forcing three turnovers in three of their previous five games and holding opponents to 21 points as well. Earlier this season, this defense dominated CAR, generating five sacks and leading the league in forcing turnovers. I don't expect the same outcome, but the upside is higher than in some of the other matchups, making them a boom-or-bust top-15 option.

LOS ANGELES CHARGERS VS NE

Despite this defense not looking good since Week 3, I am banking on the great matchup against an injured NE offense that's tied for the league's worst turnover rate. With Drake Maye out, I have no faith in the offense, and with an incredibly low projected over/under of 36 points, you can potentially play the NE defense as a last resort. However, with the resurgence of Omarion Hampton and Justin Herbert still healthy, I'd consider LAC a high-floor streaming option.
