

WEEK 4 DEF STREAMERS

LOOKING FOR TEAMS ON LESS THAN 70% OF ROSTERS IN YAHOO

1

BALTIMORE RAVENS VS TEN

While they haven't been great, giving up over 21 points in every game this season, they have generated a sack in those same games and a turnover in two games. Facing a TEN offense in the bottom five in yards and points per game, I would be surprised if they scored more than 21 points against this defense. I wouldn't expect a top-five performance, but this feels like one of those "safe" streaming options that will land somewhere between top 10-15 and get you enough points to avoid losing your week.

2

LAS VEGAS RAIDERS VS KC

It feels wild to have this defense here, and you could easily take the other side as well. But between the two, I decided to go with a top-three defense that's been really impressive, generating multiple sacks and forcing at least three turnovers in every game this season. Yes, they haven't faced strong offenses (MIA, LAC), but they've been good against an NO offense that's scored at least 24 points in every game so far. While KC has been solid, I see this as a high-upside, boom-or-bust option that could be a weekly start.

3

DETROIT LIONS @ CAR

This was tough, deciding between this defense and BUF against a struggling NE offense. However, I chose the defense that has generated five sacks and a turnover in two games over the divisional matchup. They're facing a CAR offense that has come down to earth and has given up multiple sacks in every game so far, and if Jalen Coker misses this game, then this will easily be one of my top options. Even if CAR scores points, I expect DET to generate sacks and force turnovers against an offense that has given up four turnovers so far.

4

PITTSBURGH STEELERS @ CLE

Coming off a bad game, I can understand streaming the other side of this game. Plus, the CLE offense has looked capable in back-to-back games, scoring 20+ points. However, during the first two games, they generated at least 3 sacks and forced multiple turnovers. Granted, it was against a struggling ATL and NE offense, so this would be their toughest matchup. CLE is bottom ten in yards and points per game, and I'm optimistic PIT will continue the trend, making them a risky but high-upside, low-floor last-resort streaming option.

FOLLOW US @AKAMAIFANTASY

WWW.AKAMAIFANTASYFOOTBALL.COM